

Author bio

Dr Asantha U Attanayake

Dr Asantha U. Attanayake is a Senior Lecturer attached to the University of Colombo, Sri Lanka. She received her BA from the University of Peradeniya, her MA from the University of Kelaniya and a PhD from Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. She was a Fulbright Advanced Teaching and Research Scholar at Pennsylvania State University, USA. She is a HKSEE alumna at Harvard University, USA.

Her thesis, Undergraduate ELT in Sri Lanka: Policy, Practice and Perspectives for South Asia is published (2017) by Cambridge Scholars Publishers, UK. Post-colonial Curriculum Practices in South Asia: Building Confidence to Speak English by Routledge Publishers (2019), UK is her latest addition to the academia.

Currently she is working on two other books: Technology in the ESL Classroom: CALL for a Call and An Action Research Handbook for English Language Teaching in South Asia, which she co-authors with her husband, Colonel Adam L. Barborich. She is also an award winning creative writer. She has published 3 English novel translations into Sinhala and a poetry collection Mokshya. She is compiling her memoirs, Living in the Third World with a White Husband.